

Circumderunt

Circumderunt

In memoriam H. G.

And twilight a gray rat appears with razor teeth to crack the sun and sweep the husks off with his tail the last stray straws of light are gone and night is an enormous wardrobe with wide flung double doors where God keeps his old discarded mantles and the Saviour's rags of blood in the cellar of this world with God's and Satan's junk around me as I wait for timely rescue I seem to hear feet throbbing above me in dreams I see my former flat there's nothing else that I recall but rats and shadows and the odd stripe of light along the cloud-weebbed wall

Translated by George Szirtes

From Selected Poems by István Baka

←

page Next page

→